SIR,
I observed in the 22d. number of your journal a request, that the public might be certified, as to reality of the instrument called Hadley's quadrant, an American invention. It appears from hence, you had not seen the American gazette for July August 1758, printed at Philadelphia, in that year Mr. Bradford. In that miscellany the curious may find themselves in a point, which in our opinion is beyond a doubt to be in favour of America. English, naturally jealous and envious have laboured hard to make out the invention to be their own: exactly agrees with the rest of their conduct, in endeavouring to persuade the world, that neither courage merit of any fort can exist out of their own island. In regard to the point in question, their labours
